

The Ebere Ijere foundation (EIF): the hand that gives, was created to help orphans and the needy. Also into continuing the legacy of my late father Prof Martin Ijere who wrote several books and had a passion towards developing and improving lives of the rural and poor people. Please become part of us in this mission towards improving and blessing the lives of others by donating generously through our website, www.ebereijerfoundation.com

For our good Lord created us to love Him and to love others. Bless you loads.

My name is Kevin Omondi and I am a Kenyan orphan. Before meeting Ebere who is the president of EIF, I had been facing hard times and challenges but I can at least now see worthiness in my life. They are sponsoring my medical course and helping in taking care of my essential needs. They have been so worthy in my life.

MICHAEL OUMA OTIENO BIOGRAPHY

Michael Otieno was born in the year 2003 to peasant parents. His parents unfortunately died five years later leaving him in the care of his grandmother. Michael was so much stressed to the point of losing himself to depression and confusion. The confusion led to him being involved in a road accident when he was hit by a speeding vehicle from behind.

He was so much stressed that he didn't realize he was walking on the road instead of using footpaths. The painful accident led to the damage of his spinal cord and kidney. Doctors advised that he be operated on to insert a tube into his urethral tract to aid in discharge of urine because his kidney had been damaged to a point of being dormant.

After the operation, Michael was forced to use catheters as urine discharge path. Due to his ailing condition, he dropped out of school while in class 3 at Kibuye Primary School in Kisumu.

His condition worsened and he was again taken to hospital where an 8 inch tube was inserted into his urethral tube to help ease the pain when urine is passing out. His grandmother who was unemployed at that time couldn't manage his medical needs and saw it right to abandon him. He was left alone to fend for himself and find a way to survive. There was no other option for Michael except to go to the streets to beg. His first begging spot was the Kisumu streets. He has been a beggar for 10 years trying to source money for pain relieving injections, rent which is 8 dollars a month, painkillers, food and clothing. His has been a painful and heart wrenching journey towards finding medical care and essential needs. Sometimes he'd be rained on. At other times, street urchins would steal his day's collections because he was not strong enough to defend himself. The county inspectorate officials also used to chase him away from the begging spot claiming that he was making the town dirty and stinky. In 2015, he was promised help by some missionaries but unfortunately they didn't help him in any way. Instead, they used his pictures and plight to source for funds which they later vanished with and their whereabouts is not known up to date.

When his childhood friends saw him in the streets they decided to join hands and get some help for him. So far they have managed to take him to hospital for replacement of the inserted tube and general medical checkup. The good Samaritans (friends) have also managed to secure his rental bills via Ebere Ijere Foundation situated in Switzerland. From the foundation headed by the inspiring Ebere Ijere, Michael has been assured of rental bill payment and food. The other remaining areas are the bills for; catheters (4 dollars each) bought after every week, injection syringes (7 of them) which he uses per day and a set costs 35 dollars and he is injected by a doctor who charges 5 dollars for every injection, painkillers, and other essential needs such as clothing. The major part is the money required for his corrective surgery (genitourinary surgery) and the doctor who checked him at PORT FLORENCE HOSPITAL said the process would require up to 10000 dollars. The surgery can only be done by a specialized urologist. He had earlier on got some help but when the hospital saw his condition, they changed their mind and lied that the condition can only be treated in India. This was a way of denying him help after seeing how complex the condition was. As the days go by Michael remains hopeful and prayerful that help will one day come and he'll live to achieve his dreams. Thank you and may you be blessed.

My name is Paul Otieno and I'm a full beneficiary of EIF charity programme. I'm an orphan and HIV+ and in the care of my brother. EIF has been our backbone for some time now helping in taking care of me. They sponsor my education, medical needs, food and accommodation. Before, things were not easy and even affording a three course meal was a nightmare but thanks to EIF under Mum Eby, I can now hope for a better tomorrow
